chez mila: The Selected Works of George Sand George Sand, The correspondence of George Sand and Gustave Flaubert, if approached merely as a chapter in the biographies of these heroes of nineteenth century letters, is sufficiently rewarding. In a relationship extending over twelve years, including the trying period of the Franco-Prussian War and the Commune, these extraordinary personalities disclose the aspects of their diverse natures which are best worth the remembrance of posterity. However her passionate and erratic youth may have captivated our grandfathers, George Sand in the mellow autumn of her life is for us at her most attractive phase. The storms and anguish and hazardous adventures that attended the defiant unfolding of her spirit are over. In her final retreat at Nohant, surrounded by her affectionate children and grandchildren, diligently writing, botanizing, bathing in her little river, visited by her friends and undistracted by the fiery lovers of the old time, she shows an unguessed wealth of maternal virtue, swift, comprehending sympathy, fortitude, sunny resignation, and a goodness of heart that has ripened into wisdom. For Flaubert, too, though he was seventeen years her junior, the flamboyance of youth was long since past; in 1862, when the correspondence begins, he was firmly settled, a shy, proud, grumpy toiling hermit of forty, in his family seat at Croisset, beginning his seven years' labor at L'Education Sentimentale, master of his art, hardening in his convictions, and conscious of increasing estrangement from the spirit of his age. He, with his craving for sympathy, and she, with her inexhaustible supply of it, meet; he pours out his bitterness, she her consolation; and so with equal candor of self-revelation they beautifully draw out and strengthen each the other's characteristics, and help one another grow old. But there is more in these letters than a satisfaction for the biographical appetite, which, indeed, finds ITS account rather in the earlier chapters of the correspondents' history. What impresses us here is the banquet spread for the reflective and critical faculties in this intercourse of natural antagonists. As M. Faguet observes in a striking paragraph of his study of Flaubert: It is a curious thing, which does honor to them both, that Flaubert and George Sand should have become loving friends towards the end of their lives. At the beginning, Flaubert might have been looked upon by George Sand as a furious enemy. Emma [Madame Bovary] is George Sand's heroine with all the poetry turned into ridicule. Flaubert seems to say in every page of his work: 'Do you want to know what is the real Valentine, the real Indiana, the real Lelia? Here she is, it is Emma Roualt.' 'And do you want to know what becomes of a woman whose education has consisted in George Sand's books? Here she is, Emma Roualt.' So that the terrible mocker of the bourgeois has written a book which is directly inspired by the spirit of the 1840 bourgeois. Their recriminations against romanticism 'which rehabilitates and poetises the courtesan,' against George Sand, the Muse of Adultery, are to be found in acts and facts in Madame Bovary. Now, the largest interest of this correspondence depends precisely upon the continuance, beneath an affectionate personal relationship, of a fundamental antagonism of interests and beliefs, resolutely maintained on both sides. George Sand, with her lifelong passion for propaganda and reformation, labors earnestly to bring Flaubert to her point of view, to remould him nearer to her heart's desire. He, with a playful deference to the sex and years of his friend, addresses her in his letters as Dear Master. Yet in the essentials of the conflict, though she never gives over her effort, he never budes a jot; he has taken his ground, and in his last unfinished work, Bouvard and Pecuchet, he dies stubbornly fortifying his position. To the last she speaks from a temperament lyrical, sanguine, imaginative, optimistic and sympathetic; he from a temperament dramatic, melancholy, observing, cynical, and satirical. She insists upon natural goodness; he, upon innate depravity. She urges her faith in social regeneration; he vents his splenetic contempt for the mob. Through all the successive shocks of disillusioning experience, she expects the renovation of humanity by some religious, some semi-mystical, amelioration of its heart; he grimly concedes the greater part of humanity to the devil, and can see no escape for the remnant save in science and aristocratic organization. For her, finally, the literary art is an instrument of social salvation—it is her means of touching the world with her ideals, her love, her aspiration; for him the literary art is the avenue of escape from the meaningless chaos of existence—it is his subtly critical condemnation of the world. The origins of these unreconciled antipathies lie deep beneath the personal relationship of George Sand and Gustave Flaubert; lie deep beneath their successors, who with more or less of amenity in their manners are still debating the same questions today. The main currents of the nineteenth century, with fluent and refluxing tides, clash beneath the controversy; and as soon as one hears its long withdrawing roar, and thinks it is dying away, and is become a part of ancient history, it begins again, and will be heard, no doubt, by the last man as a solemn accompaniment to his final contention with his last adversary.

chez mila: Pétrichor, l'hiver... Oihan Lorent, 2021-11-27 Une station balnéaire ; l'arrière saison. Calme, insouciance. Un homme, une femme, qui s'initient au bonheur. Mais, très vite, leur harmonie se fissure puis se brise, sans explication rationnelle, l'homme ne pouvant simplement plus supporter la simple présence de l'autre. Incapable d'en comprendre la cause, maintenant sans attache et sans repère, il part sur les routes pour tenter de retrouver la source d'une odeur insolite, apparue peu après la rupture. Celle-ci le guide vers des rencontres de hasard, certaines émanant du passé ; d'autre non, mais pourtant si étrangement familières, comme des reflets imparfaits sur une eau troublée. Quelques jeunes adultes qui se livrent aux jeux si classiques de la séduction et de l'attirance ; qui se cherchent, se jaugent, s'effleurent ou s'évitent... Un lecteur inattentif ne verra dans ce livre qu'une comédie romantique légère, rafraîchissante et gaie, et il pourra d'ailleurs parfaitement s'en contenter et s'en satisfaire même si, dans ce cas, il sera sans nul doute déconcerté par les dernières pages. Un autre, moins distrait, comprendra que, sous une forme onirique et derrière un style volontairement déstabilisant, se cache l'introspection profonde d'un homme, une recherche de sa propre vision idéalisée du couple... Mais peut-être le lecteur y trouvera-t-il tout autre chose, ce texte laissant, de par sa conception même, une large part à l'imagination et à la rêverie.

chez mila: Villa grand siècle Albert Paraz, 1955-01-01T00:00:00+01:00 Nouveau nom donné à la Maison Poulaga, ou à la Pension Bourrmann, depuis que l'inspecteur Bardot y a introduit les bonnes manières. C'en est fini des mauvais traitements et de la grossièreté envers les prévenus. Maintenant, chaque délinquant n'est pas considéré comme un coupable, mais comme un malade. Ces messieurs de la « Villa Grand Siècle » ont des attentions si exquises, qu'un innocent a plus de plaisir, assure Gorin, à être guillotiné avec les méthodes nouvelles qu'un coupable en aurait eu autrefois à être acquitté. Si l'inspecteur Bardot a pris cette heureuse initiative, c'est sur les conseils de l'Académicien Clauriac, grand romancier catholique et Prix Nobel, à qui rien de social n'est étranger. Cet illustre écrivain est sollicité par l'hebdomadaire l'Omnibus, pour rédiger - chaque semaine - un bloc-notes, qui doit paraître en dernière page et augmenter le tirage de cet organe intelligent. Clauriac accepte, à condition qu'on lui donne des boy-scouts à confesser, et qu'on lui organise une messe noire. La difficulté est que Clauriac veut confesser de vrais boy-scouts et assister à une vraie messe noire, dite dans une vraie chapelle, avec un vrai prêtre, comme au Grand Siècle. Les démarches pour obtenir l'autorisation d'officier dans une église, sont faites par un petit Bônois au langage savoureux, qui se trouve impliqué dans l'affaire des fuites et arrêté. Dans l'intervalle, l'Omnibus a réussi à porter au pouvoir un de ses rédacteurs, dit Zouli-tapis, ou Superman, qui - après avoir donné sa mesure en faisant tout le gâchis imaginable -, sombre dans l'oubli le plus absolu. Gorin se trouve amené à faire mettre en fabrication, dans le cadre des échanges européens, un appareil très raffiné, vibromasseur pour usage interne, qui doit contribuer au rapprochement des peuples. Pour échapper au grossier matérialisme, cet appareil sera consacré au cours de la messe noire. Ce pamphlet policier, mine de situations cocasses, déclenchées comme par un mouvement d'horlogerie, est la suite de Pétrouchka. C'est un livre attachant, écrit lui aussi dans un style Grand Siècle : point de ces outrances de langage si fort à la mode et qui finissent par lasser. On retrouve ici la précision et l'élégance des grandes œuvres, qu'on ne peut classer dans aucun genre, si ce n'est celui - tout à fait neuf - de « social-fiction », qui sera, bien entendu, imité, comme La fille du tonnerre l'a été. Cet aboutissement n'est qu'un point de départ.
