An altered copy of the Observer's Book of British Birds. The top of each page from p. 18-217 has been cut away around each bird illustration. The artist's name and date is signed inside the back cover, and edition number stamped on outer back cover. I have recently made a series of 9 altered Observer's books (Birds, Birds Eggs, Moths, Butterflies, Dogs, Horses, Furniture, Automobiles and Locomotives) that have been made by cutting away sections of the pages to expose the illustrations that makes the books sculptural and at times, architectural. The act of cutting turns a series of two-dimensional images into freestanding entities that can be read as flip-books or static objects and where the contents of the book can be seen at one glance. -- artist's statement.
