Historical Background and Evolution of Lilongwe

Origins and Early Settlement

Lilongwe's origins date back to the early 20th century when it was a small trading post and village. Originally inhabited by the Chewa people, the area's strategic location along trade routes contributed to its initial development. During the colonial period, the city's significance grew as the British administration established it as the administrative center of Nyasaland (now Malawi).

Transition to Capital Status

The decision to designate Lilongwe as Malawi's capital was made in the 1970s, replacing Zomba, which had served as the administrative capital since colonial times. The shift was part of a broader national strategy to decentralize government functions and promote development in the northern and central regions of Malawi. The move was also driven by Lilongwe's central geographical position, making it more accessible from various parts of the country.

Urban Development and Modernization

Following its designation as the capital, Lilongwe experienced rapid urbanization. The government invested heavily in infrastructure, including roads, government buildings, and utilities. The city was planned with a focus on administrative efficiency, featuring a designated "Old Town" and a more modern "New Town." It highlights the significance of exploring power and identity in literacy studies. Employing the concept of 'figured worlds' to study literacy as a social practice, the book focuses on understanding power relationships and identities in literacy practices. It illustrates how literacy identities and power relationships of some local community members continuously vary from one context to another and, in some cases, even within the same context. Using notions such as agency, artefact, resistance, shame and positioning, the book demonstrates the potential of the concept of figured worlds to address some of the questions raised within the New Literacy Studies - especially those concerning power and identity. The book also illustrates the value of an ethnographic approach in adult literacy studies, by exploring the capital city of malawi: The African Inheritance Ieuan Ll. Griffiths, 2005-09-30 Africa is a continent gripped by civil wars and widespread famine. The causes of many of the continent's problems are deep rooted and can be traced to Africa's colonial past, when European powers divided the spoils of the continent into separate sovereign states. The African Inheritance examines the effect this balkanization of Africa has had, and is having, on the political and economic well-being of the continent. From a brief history of pre-colonial Africa and its subsequent European partition and inevitable decolonization, the book discusses the consequences of such an inheritance: small and weak states, destructive secessionist movements, irredentism and African imperialism. Attempts to tackle these problems and assert independent development are inhibited by the colonial inheritance.

challenges faced by the researcher in gaining access to community members' activities, and the opportunity to experience first-hand what instructors go through in facilitating adult literacy lessons.

Numerous case studies from the region, mainly related to urban sources of diffuse pollution, are included. They could be regarded as typical for any developing country, suggesting tools and methods to assess and evaluate the extent of diffuse pollution problems. The book is valuable as a supplementary text for undergraduate and postgraduate students whose studies include a component of water resources and environmental engineering and management, including degree courses in Environmental, Civil and Chemical Engineering, Soil Science, Environmental Sciences and Public Health related sciences.
