The Introduction of Bingo

Bingo, the playful and energetic chimpanzee character, served as one of the show's main cast members. Alongside the other characters, Bingo's popularity led to the development of various merchandise, including toys, games, and collectibles. Among these, the Bingo game—often simply called "Bingo from Banana Splits"—became a favorite among children for its bright design and interactive gameplay.

Design and Components of the Bingo Game

Physical Characteristics

The Bingo from Banana Splits toy typically features:

The overall aesthetic emphasizes vibrant colors, cartoon-style art, and a playful, child-friendly design that appeals to young audiences.

Materials Used

Most vintage editions were made of durable cardboard or plastic, with printed artwork. Modern reproductions may incorporate safer, lightweight plastics and eco-friendly materials, reflecting contemporary manufacturing standards.

Playing the Game

1. The caller spins the device or draws a ball to randomly select an item—either a number, letter, or image.
2. The caller announces the item aloud, often with fun commentary or character voices to enhance engagement.
3. Players scan their cards to find a matching item.
4. If a match exists, the player places a marker on that spot.
5. The game continues until a player completes the predetermined pattern—called “Bingo”—and calls out to win.

Author, columnist and TV writer Paul Simper had a front-row seat at one of pop stardom's most exciting shows: the 1980s. His memoir, Pop Stars in My Pantry, is an account of a wide-eyed, wet-behind-the-ears lad from Wiltshire landing in London just as the capital's club scene went into orbit. As a pop writer and fellow clubber, he had unique access to the artists who would become the biggest pop acts of the decade. On any given day, he might be required to fly a reader to the other side of the world to hang out with Spandau Ballet, accompany Bananarama's Keren and Wham!'s George Michael on a blind date, help Frankie Goes to Hollywood chuck furniture out of TV studio windows in Rome, watch Boy George styling and flirting with Paul Weller in fake furs, or walk off into the sunset with a newbie called Madonna. It is also the tale of his own attempts at pop stardom with the help of former 'Nana Miss Jacqueline O'Sullivan and an unexpected bonus career as a showbiz party DJ for the likes of Prince, Whitney, Elton and even Al Pacino. This is an endlessly entertaining, behind-the-scenes ride – the ultimate back-stage pass – for 1980s pop enthusiasts and lovers of Smash Hits ... from the man who saw it all.
