The tone and content of the speech can vary based on the relationship with the retiree, the organizational culture, and the occasion's formality.

retirement speech colleague: The Queen at the Council Fire Nathan Tidridge, 2015-06-20 In the summer of 1764, Sir William Johnson (Superintendent of Indian Affairs) and over two thousand chiefs representing twenty-four First Nations met on the shores of the Niagara River to negotiate the Treaty of Niagara — an agreement between the British Crown and the Indigenous peoples. This treaty, symbolized by the Covenant Chain Wampum, is seen by many Indigenous peoples as the birth of modern Canada, despite the fact that it has been mostly ignored by successive Canadian governments since. The Queen at the Council Fire is the first book to examine the Covenant Chain relationship since its inception. In particular, the book explores the role of what Walter Bagehot calls “the Dignified Crown,” which, though constrained by the traditions of responsible government, remains one of the few institutions able to polish the Covenant Chain and help Canada along the path to reconciliation. The book concludes with concrete suggestions for representatives of the Dignified Crown to strengthen their relationships with Indigenous peoples.

retirement speech colleague: On Retirements Jon Barnard Gilmore, 2010-07-16 Precise, practical, poetic, and powerful. These are just four of many superlatives that could be used to describe -- but which would only begin to describe -- the artistry and crystal-clear insight of Jon Barnard Gilmore in his new book. For this is a book like no other, on a subject that millions of people will be registering to study as our population ages. As will prove true for so many readers, retirement for Gilmore has led to a series of surprises, by turns sobering and joyful. As a professor of Psychology, with many more years of teaching ahead of him before he would turn sixty-five, Gilmore was surprised to find himself falling in love with the Kootenay region of British Columbia following a chance encounter during a long drive to California. He was also surprised, a few years later, to find himself bidding on property there and then applying for early retirement from his teaching position. Kaslo, B.C., was where he thought he would live year-round. But divorce -- a further surprise -- and a new relationship have meant that he now divides his time between two regions of startling beauty: his B.C. home and the Caledon hills near Toronto. Perhaps most surprising to Gilmore has been his discovery that the real work of any life begins when we retire: that retiring consists of a series of personal and relational tasks through which we might achieve a better understanding of ourselves, and of our past, present, and future.

This book is his record of what it was like to work at the heart of British politics. Taking us through the years that followed the end of World War II up to the present day, he offers a compelling story of the characters and events that shaped British political history. Goodman's portraits include many of the political giants of the twentieth century. As a close friend of the great socialist Aneurin Bevan, he is able to reveal the philosophy and drive of the man who. Goodman also offers a behind-the-scenes account of Labour Prime Ministers Harold Wilson and James Callaghan, and brings to light new reasons why Wilson suspected the security agencies of trying to destabilise his government. Other portraits include Michael Foot, Harold Macmillan, Edward Heath, Willie Whitelaw, Margaret Thatcher, Rupert Murdoch and Hugh Cudlipp.

retirement speech colleague: West's Federal Practice Digest , 2001 retirement speech colleague: Human Activity, Social Practices and Lifelong Education Marc Durand, 2016-04-14 This volume presents a scientific and practical trend in lifelong education, which focuses on human activity. This trend is particularly apparent in French speaking countries where a seminal tradition of ergonomics, born in the middle of the 20th century, produced studies about work and workers' activity in various contexts. Results demonstrate that working activity, firstly, is always complex, creative and enigmatic despite the efforts done by the designers to create prescribing working environments and by managers to control production procedures, and secondly, cannot be understood without specific field studies about real work. This approach influenced adult educational researchers and trainers to develop programs in order to help trainers to better know human activity and its transformations in various social practices (and not only in working context). It also helps them to design learning environments accompanying human activity transformations at various time scales. The chapters in this volume present a range of original studies on human activity in various social practices, such as tourism, theatre prop-makers in opera, manual job environments, management in a small company, high level athletes illegal practices, school teaching and finally during teachers retirement ceremonies. These studies of the relationships between social practices and human activity and its transformations, give empirical and conceptual bases for designing programs aimed at emphasizing and accompanying specific individual and collective learning, and human development in a lifelong perspective. This book was published as a special issue of International Journal of Lifelong Education.

retirement speech colleague: Acting for Virtue Thomas M. Edwards, Cosimo Chiera, 2025-05-20 From time immemorial, those who have had the greatest impact on helping people to live well have, themselves, sought a particular way of being, lived artfully, or developed an aesthetic of life. Be it Marcus Aurelius, Confucius, Wilberforce, Rumi, or Sojourner Truth, such people have spoken about the pragmatics of the world from a place of deep authenticity and congruence. They share common virtues. Virtues are, put simply, humanity's greatest good. They resonate deeply within us all and inspire the most extraordinary change. The practitioners, scholars, and advocates who have generously contributed to this book have each wondered if virtue is the missing link in successful counselling. From different perspectives, considering both clients and counsellors, looking at various therapeutic problems, and using numerous client stories alongside lived experience, they have successfully shown that virtue not only demonstrates how to intervene successfully but also why many interventions are successful.
