However, their functions are different. An insurance company ensures its customers against certain risks, such as the risk of having a car accident or the risk that a house catches on fire. In return for this insurance, their customers pay them regular insurance premiums. Banks accept short-term deposits and make long-term loans. This means that there is a mismatch between their liabilities and their assets. In case a large number of their depositors want their money back, for example in a bank run scenario, they might have to come up with the money in a hurry. For an insurance company, however, its liabilities are based on certain insured events happening. Their customers can get a pay-out if the event they are insured against, such as their house burning down, does happen. They don't have a claim on the insurance company otherwise.
